RESOLUTIONS OFFERED. Three resolutions were offered before

Mayor Jones, of Toledo, was introduced. The first was for a vote of thanks to W R. Hearst in acknowledgment of his services to the organization of Democratic Clubs, the second providing for a boycott of firms and corporations who attempt to coerce the votes of their employes and the third providing for a report of the perma nent organization committee at the opening of this morning's session. The appearance of Mayor Samuel M Jones at the edge of the rostrum was the ignal for an ovation such as has only peretofore been accorded by Democratic lences to their "matchless leader," Willared proudly that he owed allegiance William Jennings Bryan in November-a statement which was hailed with a proonged outburst of applause and cheers, the delegates rising to their feet in excess of enthusiasm at mention of their leader's name. Mayor Jones is an interesting man sterday afternoon, addressing the conrention, he looked like a fairly well-dressed der-colored negligee shirt. His style of particularly the Scriptures, and possesses he knack of constructing striking senparty, a free, untrammeled soul" was one his characteristic utterances. Another was this: "Somebody has said that I am | against organizatior. I am not against anything. I am for everything." In his arraignment of government by force, Mr. nes referred casually to the race quesion in the territory south of Mason's and Dixon's line. Some of his choicest gems "It is a good deal more heroic to e ready to die for the cause of liberty than don't want our flag to be feared, we want it loved. I am just as ready to go to a convention, if I am invited, a make this same speech, or one like it-I never make two speeches exactly allkeat it is, after all, the same old speech am ready even to go to a Republican echvention and make it, but I have not been invited. You can't get terrapin and mery Sec out of a 'full dinner pail. The devil tried to tempt Christ when he was 'an hungered.' That is the time to catch

CAUSED A LAUGH. Mr. Jones created quite a laugh by de claring that like "coors, all people look alike" to him. In closing his address h rapped the Prohibitionists severely by re ferring to himself as being ready to take a step in advance instead of "standing like a stone wall as the Prohibitionists have stood for twenty-five years and got no where." The "Golden Rule" mayor threw asserting that "the mother ought to be the politica! equal of the son she rears; there ould then be no question about the vic-Mr. Jones was heaped with honors after his speech, three cheers being first proposed and given with a will and aftera vote of thanks tendered him for his "able argument in behalf of liberty." C. Vey Holman, of Bango: Me., addressed to W. R. Hearst, the other from John De Witt Warner, of New York, addressed to James L. Keach. The first message was n the nature of a "confession of sins," Mr. Holman saving that while he antagon-ized Bryan in 1896 in Indianapolis, he now desired in the same city to affirm his allegiance to the "matchless leader." Mr. Warher announced that New York Democrats stand united in support of Bryan "against Hanna and hog rule."

A RARE TREAT. The last and greatest treat on the programme was a speech from James Hamilten Lewis, of the State of Washington. When the crowd recovered from the stupor into which it was thrown by the sudden bursting of Lewis's glory of whiskers and spotless apparel upon its enraptured vision, some one "started the ball to rolling" by proposing three cheers for "the great Democrat of the Pacific coast." These being fifty-five minutes in passing. given, acted like a spur to Lewis's gift of oratory, and he made one of the most remarkable addresses ever delivered to an intelligent audience. He alternated between fights into lofty realms of oratory and descents into the lowest depths of the ridiculous. He quoted Scripture and told 'coon" stories in dialect, with reckless prodigality and total disregard of the prosties. He likened himself to Napo and Mayor Jones to Hannibal. He referred to Tamerlane and Ghengis Khan in conion with about all the other celebrities of classical and modern history. One of the heartiest laughs his buffoonery provoked was his allusion to "The Foaming Beveridge of Indiana." One of his irrefutable ments was that "for any man to deny that the Constitution follows the flag is to deny that the Bible follows the cross." He said that the Bible trust was organize to limit the supply of Bibles so that men might not know that the first law of God "thou shalt love thy neighbor as thy-

The audience evidently realized that the inimitable Lewis was brought here for their entertainment, and they made the most of the opportunity, laughing themspeak only about one-fourth of them had selves almost into convulsions over his clownish wit. Mr. Lewis has come to appreciate thoroughly the estimation in which he is held by the general public, and it does not appear to displease or worry him in the least. The first few sentences of his speech show this clearly. He said: A CHOICE BIT.

"Mr. Chairman, gentleman of the Domoeratic Association of Clubs, and ladies and gentlemen, your guests. I must, of course, express my sincere appreciation of the flattering reception you kindly give me at the instance of a heroic Democrat from New York, but I have concluded, judging from what these newspaper boys are writing of me to-day-and I am afraid of them allthat I have been brought here at this time, not so much for what I might say, but in liam J. Mr. Lewis must certainly have felt proud of his main achievement yesterday afternoon, which was to crowd out Governor Benton McMillin, of Tennessee, from making the speech which he was announced on the programme to deliver. So carried away by Mr. Lewis's eloquence was the audience that a great party leader and brilliant orator such as Governor Mc it is to be ready to kill somebody else. We Millin paled into insignificance. At the conclusion of Mr. Lewis's speech a rush was made for the exits and all thought of After the convention adjourned it was stated that Governor McMillin was too ill to make a speech, but no reason for his failure to do so was made public from the platform during the session. A great deal of chagrin at the crowd's unseemly conduct in thus cavalierly ignoring one of the biggest men in the party was displayed by those occupying the platform after the meeting was over.

STREET DEMONSTRATION. A Creditable Showing Made by the Democratic Clubs. The street demonstration heralded for days, although creditable, was not record-breaking affair anticipated by the local Democrats, and had it not been for the exceedingly large turnout of local organizations it would have been a failure. Aside from the thirty bands and drum corps there were, by actual count, 3,258 people in the parade. This number included the bona fide club members, the boys and girls and the sixty-three colored voters corralled and commanded by Mayor Taggart. Had it not been for the Duckworth Club of Cincinnati, the Cook County Marching Club of Chicago and the Jefferson Club of St. Louis, Indiana would have had the proud distinction of representing alone the National Association of Democratic

The glamour of the carnival decorations the red fire and the large crowd of curious expectant Indianapolitans who watched the marchers from the adjacent sidewalks considerably enhanced the proportions of the demonstration and lent to it an attractiveness it would not otherwise have possessed. At the head of the parade marched the Liberty Drum Corps, followed by Chief Marshal Robbins and his staff. Then came the first division in charge of George Marott. This division was composed of the Gray Club, of Indianapolis, with 142 men in line and headed by the Indianapolis Military Band, which had out its full comple ment of forty pieces; the Cook County Marching Club, of Chicago, with 168 men in line, and with De Baugh's Band of thirty pieces in front of it; the Jackson Club, of Terre Haute, with ninety-two men in line; the Bryan Club, of Franklin, made up of 129 men and boys, and fifteen carriages containing Adlai Stevenson and other prominent Democrats from Illinois and Indiana and twenty-five members of the Jefferson Democratic Club, of St. Louis. Stevenson's presence was greeted with great enthusiasm all along the line of parade, being in marked contrast to the reception accorded him on the occasion of his notification in this city in August. The second division was in charge of Marshal Maurice Donnelly, who rode at its head surrounded by an escort of forty horsemen. Paid for Marching.

About 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon in front of the Journal office a Democrat approached two colored men and offered to pay them to march in the Democratic rocession if they would come to him after the parade was over. They agreed to go, but when the man who offered the money had passed out of hearing, one of them said to the other: "I'll march for pay, but I'm going to vote for McKinley.'

In his speech at Columbus, Mr. Bryan declared that no man had the right to own and govern an other. "If there are any Irishmen here," he said, "I want to ask them how long it Mayor Taggart's smooth hand directed this foreign domination, even with only a narrow channel of the sea between Ireland and the land of her governess."

Now Jefferson's name about 2 o'clock this afternoon, and that was never mentioned, but Alexander Hamiton had become their great exemplar. Hamilton had taught that society was divided into two classes, the well-born and the lowly-born and that the well-born were entitled to govern the lowly-born. He discussed the trusts at some length, saying that he was not satisfied with the condition of independence enjoyed by them. Mr. Bryan again chided the Republicans for failing to mention the Declaration of Independence in their Philadelphia platform. He said: "Let me call your attention to the fact that the chairman of the House committee on military affairs, the man who had charge of the bill raising the army to 100,000, is the president of the Filipino Lumber and Development Company, which has valuable timber land in the Philippine islands, and in its prospectus says the labor question there is easily solved, because there is Chinese labor there and it can be had for from 50 to 75 cents a day, Mexican money."

A CORNFIELD.

Touching Incident at the Destruction of an Old Homestead-Joseph Keith Taken to Princeton.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal.

DUBLIN, Ind., Oct. 3 .- Harry Swartz and William Walters, farmers, living near Strawns, four miles west of Dublin, met in a cornfield on the Walters farm, and a fierce battle with stones ensued, resulting in the dangerous injury of both men, Swartz more seriously than Walters.

A feud has existed between both men for several months, and during a discussion, which they entered into when they met in the field, both lost their temper. Walters is under arrest.

Police and Robber Exchange Shots. Special to the Indianapolis Journal.

MUNCIE, Ind., Oct. 3.-Cowan was terrorized this morning as a result of a shooting scrape between the night watchman, Peter Quirk, at the Neff washing machine factory, and a robber. The night watchman noticed a thief at work with a lantern in the store of Heinshaw & Deardoff and ordered his surrender. The man started to run. The night watchman fired two shots, one breaking the globe in the lantern the man carried. The thief then wheeled and fired two shots, one piercing a coat sleeve on Quirk, but he was not injured. The thief escaped.

DALE CASE OUT OF COURT.

Judge Said Suit Was a Move to Get Defendant's Money. Special to the Indianapolis Journal.

RUSHVILLE, Ind., Oct. 3.-Judge Morris to-day, in the Rush Circuit Court, sustained a demurrer to the complaint in the suit of John H. Frazee and sisters against Charles F. Dale, which ends the case in this court. The Frazees charged Dale with the murder of their parents, Ben Frazee and wife, their brother, Edward Frazee, and sister, Mrs. Laura Dale, wife of Charles F. Dale. The motive alleged was the possession of his wife's estate. The plaintiffs asked that Dale's title to the land be set aside and through his alleged murderous acts, invalidated his right of inheritance. Dale demurred to the complaint on the ground that it was against the Indiana law of inheritance. The court in ruling for Dale characterized the suit as a mercenary move to get Dale's property. The court further criticised the Frazees for discouraging the recent grand jury investigation of the Dale murder charges, and said the criminal phase of the case should be looked into
